

All About the Archdale & Trinity area...

Hello! We're glad you inquired about the Archdale/Trinity area. Whether you're planning to relocate here or simply enjoy a visit, we're sure you'll enjoy our friendly small-town atmosphere with all the big-city amenities.

The Archdale/Trinity area in Randolph County is a picturesque place to call home, offering lovely country landscapes, yet only minutes from Greensboro, High Point and Winston-Salem. Interstates 85, 73, 74 and 40 are at our doorstep, placing entertainment, and cultural and sporting activities within a short drive. Part of the Piedmont Triad, we are ideally located in the center of North Carolina, halfway between Charlotte and Raleigh, and positioned between New York and Atlanta on the eastern seashore. The mountains are only two hours away; ocean beaches are just a three-hour drive.

But there's plenty to do right here! Randolph County is home to the world-class North Carolina Zoo and famous Seagrove Potters. In addition, antique shopping, sports and museums abound. The Archdale/Trinity area also hosts fun-filled events including Bush Hill Heritage Festival, Jack Frost Soccer Tournament, Spooky Woods, and the Jerome Davis PBR Rodeo. Outdoor lovers will be delighted with the golfing, fishing, hiking and boating we have to offer. Our county is situated in the Uwharrie National Forest and is graced with four beautiful lakes.

Regarding growth and development, the Archdale/Trinity area offers an attractive, progressive business climate, ideal for expanding or relocating companies. Housing is abundant as Randolph County boasts the lowest property tax in the Piedmont Triad, and one of the lowest in the state. Hundreds of homes in all price ranges are available. Educational opportunities abound as well with an outstanding selection of more than 16 nearby colleges and universities.
